

Deirdre A. Kramer Michael J. Bopp
Editors

Transformation in Clinical and Developmental Psychology

Springer-Verlag

Contents

Preface	vii
Contributors	xiii
1 Introduction DEIRDRE A. KRAMER and MICHAEL J. BOPP	1
Part 1: General Historical and Theoretical Perspectives
2 On the Implications of the Relativity/Quantum Revolution for Psychology JEFFREY G. JOHNSON	25
3 Changing the Known; Knowing the Changing: The General Systems Theory Metatheory as a Conceptual Framework to Study Complex Change and Complex Thoughts JAN D. SINNOTT	51
Part 2: Contextualist Perspectives
4 William James' Pragmatism: A Clarification of the Contextual World View PATRICIA E. KAHLBAUGH	73
5 Contextualism, Naturalistic Inquiry, and the Need for New Science: A Rethinking of Everyday Memory Aging and Childhood Sexual Abuse JOHN C. CAVANAUGH and KELLY R. MORTON	89
6 The Contextual–Epistemic Approach to Psychotherapy CHRISTOPHER K. GERMER	115

7	Discovering the Social–Cultural Context of Research: Listening to and Learning from Research Participants JOHN A. MEACHAM	136
 Part 3: Dialectical, Organismic Perspectives
8	Dependent-Independence in Adult–Child Relationships LUCIEN T. WINEGAR, K. ANN RENNINGER, and JAAN VALSINER	157
9	The Dialectics of Forgetting and Remembering Across the Adult Lifespan CAMERON J. CAMP and LESLIE A. MCKITRICK	169
10	Toward a Constructive-Developmental Understanding of the Dialectics of Individuality and Irrationality MICHAEL BASSECHES	188
11	Change and Stability in Marital Interaction Patterns: A Developmental Model DEIRDRE A. KRAMER	210
12	The Nuclear Crisis: Insights from Metatheory and Clinical Change Theories MICHAEL J. BOPP	234
Author Index		251
Subject Index		259